

THE PMEYES WAY

How we work at PMeyes

Think Ahead – Build Smart

Our promise to clients is simple: predictability. Every planner in the PMeyes Planning Network carries that promise. One promise, three principles, five practices. If you recognize yourself in it, you belong with us.

THE PROMISE

We engineer predictability. Planning is not a reporting machine — it is a forward-looking steering tool. Our job is that the project leader is never surprised: we saw it coming, said it early, and offered a way out.

THREE PRINCIPLES

1. Predictive, not reactive. We do not wait, react, and firefight. We look ahead, model what can happen, and act on time. A risk raised early is a decision; a risk raised late is a crisis.

2. The schedule serves the project — not the other way around. We bring a strategic mindset to planning. We connect commercial intent with execution reality. We read the contract, understand the business drivers, and build the plan around them.

3. Honest numbers, always. We report what is true, not what is comfortable. Progress is measured, not estimated by feeling. When the plan is not realistic, we say it — respectfully, with data, and with an alternative.

FIVE PRACTICES

1. We own the schedule. Baseline, progress, forecast, close-out — end-to-end responsibility. We never say “the software calculated it.” We can explain every date and every float.

2. We plan with the team, not for the team. A plan made alone is a document. A plan made with engineering, procurement and construction is a commitment.

3. We measure what matters. Critical path, trends, and early warning signals — not a hundred KPIs nobody reads. Our reports help leaders decide.

4. We speak human, not only software. P6, Excel, MS Project or AI are our tools, not our identity. We translate data into a clear message: where we stand, where we go, what needs a decision today.

5. We keep learning. Methods evolve, projects change, and so do we. Qualified Planners share lessons within the network and stay sharp.
